Canary profile | MaxiZoo

Canaries are small passerine songbirds; they are in the finch family. Canaries exist in a wide variety of colors including white, red, yellow, green, beige, black, rose, bronze, brown and orange. A canary has roughly 2000 feathers. Male canaries learn their sweet, intricate songs from their fathers and other male members of the family.

Canaries - Pet Supplies Plus

The canaries sold in pet stores are now genetically quite different from their wild canary ancestors. Canaries readily breed with other species of finches. This hybridization yields unique canaries. For example, red canaries resulted from the breeding of domestic canaries with red siskins, a South American finch.
