Not wanting the hassle of rolling back all three of my Win 7 machines, I just took a flyer and installed the KB4100480 security-only patch - downloaded from the MS catalogue. Which is how I've been spending my Saturday (until now) — getting a passel of Win 7 Pro x64 (and a few Home) machines squared away.

There is a IoT (Internet of Things) version of Windows 10 that is the replacement for Windows Embedded. I would think it has these kind of pop-ups disabled, but I'm not personally familiar with it. Black Box (to name one off the top of my head) and several other vendors have off the shelf products for digital signage that don't use Windows.

I bought some iron-on patches that I'm gonna put on a jacket for a friend's present, but they won't stick. I followed the instructions to heat the iron up to its hottest and use a cloth to stop it scorching, but nothing's happening! The jacket is denim, and the patches were all sold as iron-on but they won't stick at all, and seeing as there's about £30 worth of patches there I'd like to know ...
