Sustainable human development has become an empty mantra. Those who invoke it alert us that they are not oblivious to certain concerns, in particular those relating to the need to avoid unjustifiable damage to the environment which sustains human life, and the need to ensure a development path which brings about the expansion of real human freedom for as many as possible (not merely expanding the means to such freedom).

Sustainable Human

Sustainable development is defined as “development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs.” The concept of needs goes beyond simply material needs and includes values, relationships, freedom to think, act, and participate, all amounting to sustainable living, morally, and spiritually.

Sustainable Development - an overview | ScienceDirect Topics

Mode of human development. Sustainable development is the organizing principle for meeting human development goals while simultaneously sustaining the ability of natural systems to provide the natural resources and ecosystem services on which the economy and society depend. The desired result is a state of society where living conditions and resources are used to continue to meet human needs without undermining the integrity and stability of the natural system.

Sustainable development - Wikipedia

This is a telling omission given that there is overwhelming evidence that human development is not sustainable. The founder of the Human Development Report, Mahbub ul Haq, says “ [t]he basic purpose of development is to enlarge people’s choices. In principle, these choices can be infinite and can change over time”.

Human Rights in Sustainable Development. In September 2015, agreement was reached at the UN on the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, including 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and corresponding targets to be achieved by 2030. In the years prior to the Agenda’s adoption, CESR’s analysis and advocacy played a leading role in ensuring that human rights standards and principles were reflected in the new development agenda, including by co-convening the Human Rights Caucus.

When these needs aren't met, we will engage in really weird and potentially destructive behaviors to try to meet them. The new stories we tell need to be grounded in the values of empathy, compassion, cooperation, and love so that people can meet these core human needs without being conned into buying some new fancy product or service.

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), also known as the Global Goals, were adopted by all United Nations Member States in 2015 as a universal call to action to end poverty, protect the planet and ensure that all people enjoy peace and prosperity by 2030. The 17 SDGs are integrated —that is, they recognize that action in one area will affect outcomes in others, and that development must balance social, economic and environmental sustainability.
